THE FABRIC OF OUR FLAGS

Adapted from poem by William Lulliam, Jr., on "The Fabric," printed in "The Photo Era."

The fabric of our flags was spun
From more than simple thread,
'T was woven from the hearts and hopes
Of our heroic dead;
The blue field proves their constancy,
The red their sacrifice,
The white the Faith for which they died,
And nobly paid the price.

The stars were plucked from Heaven's vault
And stitched upon the blue
As shining lamps of Liberty
To light the whole world through.
God blessed the shuttle as it sped
To warp and woof entwined,
And Love, by deft and tender touch,
Completed the design.

'T was Freedom snatched them from the loom
For Liberty to bear,
As banner, pledge and star of Hope
To mankind — everywhere.
All that we are, or hope to be
Is woven in their folds;
The glory of our Nation stands —
A Nation we uphold.

The fabric of our flags was spun
By those who lived and died
That we might have that liberty
For which they Fate defied;
And we, if of their breed and blood,
Must strive with every breath,
For those that follow after us,
Yea, even unto — death!

Upheld by our men and means the Stars and Stripes are today the confidence of our Allies and the hope of the Liberty-loving world.
